

PROPOSED NATURAL GAS SITE 120th & Military

Existing project site

Facing southwest, an artist's rendering depicts the proposed natural gas generation site located near North 120th Street & Military Road.

Power with Purpose

This project is part of OPPD's larger decarbonization study, which will help us understand how we can make progress toward our goal of net-zero carbon production by 2050.

Power with Purpose is OPPD's solar and natural gas project that moves us toward that goal and supports OPPD's unwavering mission to provide affordable, reliable and environmentally sensitive energy services to customers. OPPD is siting and developing up to 600 megawatts of utility-scale solar generation, and up to 600 megawatts of backup natural gas. This will be the largest renewable project of its kind in the Midwest.

Existing project site

Facing northwest from Rambleridge Road, an artist's rendering depicts the proposed natural gas generation site located near North 120th Street & Military Road. This location would include RICE technology and supporting structures for generation, along with a substation for transmission.

RICE Technology

Reciprocating engine (RICE) technology utilizes internal combustion engines, similar to a car engine. RICE facilities are typically smaller than combustion turbine generation facilities. OPPD currently uses small-scale RICE at our Elk City Station.

120th & Military Site

The proposed natural gas plant at the North 120th Street & Military Road location would include six to nine reciprocating engines for generation, along with a substation for transmission.

Natural Gas Backup

New natural gas facilities will provide greater operating flexibility and enable OPPD to further integrate renewable energy into our portfolio, while maintaining affordability, reliability and resiliency.

Adding this generation will help OPPD meet the growing energy needs of our service territory and will enable OPPD's system to remain resilient. That means OPPD can continue providing energy to our customers even when operations are impacted by a major outage event.

Why Natural Gas?

Accredited capacity

Cost-effective

Supports renewable energy integration

Cleaner energy, efficient fuel

Complements up to 600 MW of planned solar facilities

Important step in our journey to decarbonization
